As we celebrate Girl Talk's 5th anniversary, I have to take a step back to fully comprehend what this program has accomplished in such a short time. I am humbled by the success and growth of Girl Talk. Every day high school and middle school girls inspire me to continue to develop this organization to meet their needs. I feel that it is up to Girl Talk to truly fuel their inspiration so they can continue to develop their leadership skills, as well as their passion for community service.

At Girl Talk, we want to fuel the curriculum that more than 30,000 girls use each week. We want to fuel our resources and communication efforts with Girl Talk girls, teachers, administrators, parents, social workers, and guidance counselors. We want to fuel scholarship opportunities for deserving Girl Talk leaders, and most importantly, we want to begin preparing to fuel and equip the next generation of young girls with the resources they need to become leaders.

This year Girl Talk has reached a milestone that represents a new level of determination, courage, and risk, and—most importantly—a new level of inspiration. Please join me in celebrating five years of inspiring young girls and being inspired. We feel that this is one of many milestones, and the girls that have benefited from Girl Talk know this is just the beginning. With your help, we want to fuel America's 12.6 million middle and high school girls through mentoring and inspire them to become future community leaders.

I would like to introduce our first fundraising campaign, "Fuel for Inspiration." It is our hope that you and those around you will want to join us in our effort to fuel inspiration for girls across America through Girl Talk. To learn more about the mission and goals of our campaign, visit www.desiretoinspire.org. We know that because of you, we will be able to fuel even more of America's inspired teenaged girls.
